

Evalueserve names Nand Gangwani as the new COO

Appoints Manu Dangi as country head, India, and Ashutosh Gupta as global BU head for Financial Services

Gurgaon / San Ramon, 5 April 2016: Global professional services provider Evalueserve has appointed its CFO, Nand Gangwani, as the company's new COO. Nand will now oversee the company's finances as well as its global operations.

Manu Dangi, previously the vice president of Evalueserve's Financial Services division, has been appointed the country head, India. She will manage Evalueserve's largest operations base, including key functions such as Offshore HR, IT, and Knowledge Technology (KT). In her new capacity, she will also chair the Evalueserve Innovation Council, a global initiative that promotes idea generation and channels innovation – a key function which supports the company's mind+machine strategy.

Ashutosh Gupta expands his responsibilities and becomes the global business unit head for Financial Services. He is now in charge of global strategic initiatives, and sales and operations of the business unit.

“All three are seasoned professionals who will lead the company into a more successful future. It is good to see that we were able to hand-pick these new leaders from among the senior talent at Evalueserve. The initiatives, such as management trainings and mentorship programs, which we have taken over the last years created growth and equal employment opportunities for all our employees,” says Marc Vollenweider, CEO Evalueserve. “Manu’s role is very important for the success of our mind+machine™ strategy. Evalueserve’s Innovation Council helps us provide clients with the ‘machine’ component of our mind+machine strategy. We have many creative and tech-savvy employees at Evalueserve and in the Innovation Council, who contribute ideas and develop tools and automations for our clients as well as increase internal efficiency – it is a quite unique concept,” Vollenweider added.

Nand joined Evalueserve in 2008 as its CFO. He has since transformed the finance team into a dynamic unit that successfully managed Evalueserve's financial growth through difficult economic times as well as a major corporate restructuring. In 2012, Nand was recognized as one of the top 100 CFOs by the CFO Institute.

Nand was awarded CFO 100 (top 100 CFOs by CFO Institute) in 2011 and 2013 for creating leading edge competencies in accounting and finance using innovative ways. He made the CFO 100 list again in 2015 for his visionary approach to zero cost finance function. CFO World (Europe) did a cover article on Nand for successful transformation of Evalueserve's corporate finance group, from a pure cost center to a revenue and profit generating business unit.

Manu has been working with Evalueserve for 14 years. Before taking on her current role, she headed the fundamental research operations for financial services clients in India. She has been instrumental in building and growing the company's research capabilities to support our institutional and retail financial services clients. Manu has extensive experience in setting up, transitioning, and managing large-scale research operations, which has prepared her well for the country head role.

Ashutosh joined Evalueserve in 2006. In his new role as the global BU head for Financial Services, he will manage the Asia region, in addition to his existing portfolio of responsibilities. Ashutosh was previously an executive director at Goldman Sachs.
